Phoenix, AZ - For Immediate Release

Pueblo Grande Museum's 33rd Annual Indian Market

The Pueblo Grande Museum will host its 33rd annual Indian Market on December 12 and 13, 2009 at the South Mountain Park, 10919 South Central Ave, Phoenix, AZ from 9:30am – 5:00pm on Saturday and 9:30am to 4pm on Sunday. Admission is $8 for adults, $5 for seniors, and children under 12 are admitted free.

More than 250 certified Native American Artists from more than 50 tribes will be selling their own work. Artwork will range in price from $5 to $7000 and include such items as jewelry, baskets, paintings, pottery, fetishes, weaving and carvings.

In addition, there will be two days of entertainment by Indian artists spotlight singers, dancers and musicians. Visitors are also invited to visit the children's area, learn from a variety of artist demonstrators and partake in any of the delicious food choices including Indian Fry Bread.

Proceeds benefit the mission of the Pueblo Grande Museum and a scholarship program for Native American students who are majoring in the field of art.
